Numb. 217.

THE South-Carolina Gazette.

Containing the freſheſt Advices Foreign and Domeſtick.

From Thurſday, MARCH 16, to Thurſday, MARCH 23, 1738.

To the Printer.

SIR,

AS you have thought fit to publiſh the Animadverſions of the malignant Zoilus, it may be fairly expected, that you will be as ready to lay before the Publick, any proper Reply that may be offer'd, in Behalf of your late injur'd Correſpondent T. B. A Correſpondent, Sir, let me tell you, of whom you ought to have been more tender, than to ſuffer him to be inſulted in ſo outrageous a Manner. Methinks your own Intereſt, (though you had been loſt to all Senſe of what is truly valuable) ſhould have prompted you to ſcreen that Writer from injurious Treatment: For never did any eſſay of our own Growth, whether we regard the Matter, or the Manner; the Deſign, or the Execution; better deſerve your Protection, or bid ſo fair to enhance the Reputation, and promote the Sale of your Paper.—However, though you have given us both juſt Cauſe of Reſentment; I am, as far as is conſiſtent with the Devotion I owe my Principal,

Sir,

Your humble Servant,

MISOGYNUS.

Tibi parata erunt Verba, huic Verbera. TERENT.

On reading the firſt Paragraph of the virulent Remarks now under my Conſideration, I conceiv'd ſome Hope that the Author intended to confine himſelf within the Bounds of Decency and good Manners. I was inclin'd to impute the Diffidence and Irreſolution he there profeſſes, to a Glimpſe of Modeſty that now firſt dawn'd on his haughty Soul, and was owing to the forcible Influence of thoſe new and important Truths, which yet he was determin'd to gain-ſay. But as he ſoon throws off the Diſguiſe, and reſumes his natural Arrogance; I reſolv'd, without wavering in my Reſolution, to follow him Step by Step: And wherever I overlook a Paſſage, the judicious Reader will eaſily perceive that it contains Nothing either of Wit or Argument, but is purely declamatory.

Firſt, then, I obſerve that it ill becomes a well-bred Man to tear-off a Gentleman's Maſk. My abuſed Principal had very ſufficient Reaſons for writing under a feigned Character: But it is his Misfortune, in common with all Authors of a firſt-Rate Genius, that he cannot lie conceal'd: His Productions are ſo diſtinguiſhably good, that they immediately confeſs their Author to Readers of any Diſcernment. Our Animadverter ſeems to take a peculiar Pleaſure in pointing-out his Name and Function; but it is not eaſy to gueſs the Reaſon of ſuch a Procedure, ſince the Diſcovery will but endear the Piece in Queſtion to all thoſe, who have the Happineſs of knowing the Writer, and are acquainted with his amiable Qualities. I ſhall therefore make no Scruple to confeſs, that the illuſtrious Perſonage, whoſe Name, Country, and Profeſſion are ſo plainly pointed-out by Zoilus, is the Author of thoſe Reflections that were ſo gracefully receiv'd by the Publick; and ſhall now ſet myſelf to defend him in propria Perſona, in whoſe Service I have voluntarily enliſted myſelf: And I gladly embrace this Occaſion of declaring my Ambition to be eſteem'd the faithful Vaſſal of ſuch a Patron, and my firm Reſolution to dedicate to the Support of his Cauſe and Reputation, my Tongue, my Pen and my Sword.

This worthy Paſtor is accuſed of having inſtructed his Audience in the Words of a Canterbury Divine: But this Charge is ſo far from reflecting any Diſhonour upon him, that nothing could repreſent his Modeſty in a more advantageous Light. Is it not a ſurprizing Inſtance of Humility, that bleſs'd as he is, both by Nature and Art, with all the Qualifications requiſite to enable him to ſhine an Orator, and to entertain the politeſt Congregation out of his own proper Fund; he ſhould yet diſtruſt his Abilities, neglect his own Compoſitions, and chuſe to imitate the Conduct of Sir Roger's Chaplain, in delivering a printed Diſcourſe, without preſuming to make the leaſt Alterations?

Nor will it be a more difficult Task, to evince, that our Preacher acted upon the moſt prudential Motives, when he choſe to retail the Sermons of this Kentiſh Divine. He was acquainted with the Hiſtory of thoſe Poſthumous Works, which were printed with no other View, than to afford ſome Relief to the Author's Widow. As it was probable therefore that few would purchaſe them, beſides the Friends and Pariſhioners of the Deceaſed, it might be reaſonably preſum'd, that theſe Remains would be buried, in as deep an Obſcurity as their Author liv'd. Now what ſtronger Recommendation could they poſſibly have, than the little probability there was of a Diſcovery; and that it would not be in the Power of Sceffers to expoſe the humble Theft to his weak and injudicious Hearers?

But what could provoke our ſupercilious Critic to mention Mr. Cook's Writings with ſo contemptuous an Air? Sure I am, that the Specimen, he gives us of that Writer's Style, is no proper Subject for Ridicule; but, on the contrary, has a juſt Claim to our Admiration, for it's Beauty and Elegance. 'Tis true, indeed, that moſt of the Moderns, who have ſhamefully degenerated from the manly Eloquence of the Ancients, have branded this elaborate Figure with opprobrious Names, ſuch as empty Jingle and puerile Affectation: But Antiquity, more juſt to it's Merit, gave it the Sanction of frequent Practice, and dignified it with pompous Titles. Were I not under terrible Apprehenſions of being cenſur'd for Pedantry, if I ſhould produce an unfaſhionable Liſt of Quotations from Heathen Authors; I could eaſily ſhew how fond the Greeks were of their Paroemeſis: And for the Romans, Tully alone would furniſh me with numberleſs Examples of this Beauty, whoſe Name he latiniz'd, (ad Herenn. IV. 29.) and call'd it Annominatio. But in Juſtice to Mr. Cook, I think my ſelf oblig'd to declare, that I have no where ſeen this Figure, ſo beautifully exemplified as in this Paſſage, except only in that celebrated Line,

O Tite, tute, Tati, tibi tanta, tyranne, tulisti!

This Article having run to an unexpected Length, I muſt defer the remaining Part of my Answer. I had design'd to be very large in the Vindication of my Patron's moral Character, being amply provided with Materials for that Purpose: If I find it necessary, I shall once more appear in Print. In the mean Time I cannot take leave of the Press, without recalling to the Reader's Memory a remarkable Paragraph that has been taken little or no Notice of by our Adversary. I shall not be sollicitous, whether or not I preserve my Character with Regard to the Ladies, while I attempt to treat it (as it deserves) like some celebrated Passage in a famous Author, by making the most exact Parody I can upon it, in the following Words.

"I shall mention but one unreasonable Humour more "that seems to prevail more peculiarly among the Irish. "As a Person of that Nation is generally very apt to con- "ceive too good an Opinion of himself, he is frequently "deluded by the most general and common Civilities, and "sometimes even by the plainest Indifference, into a "strange Notion that the young Lady of the House is ena- "mour'd with him forsooth; and that there is a Conspiracy "among her Relations to secure his valuable Person "in the Family. Upon this Conclusion, it is impossible "that the Lady can receive any Compliment in his Pre- "sence, but that it must certainly be intended to recom- "mend her to his Good-liking. And if upon Examination "of her Fortune, our Adventurer is dispos'd to pity her, "his Politeness must induce him to save the Lady the Con- "fusion of an express Discovery of her Inclinations, and "her Friends the Necessity of being before-hand with him "in advancing absolute Proposals towards a Match: when "if it should happen, as it often does, that his Declara- "tion is receiv'd on all Hands with equal Surprize and "Contempt; after he has curs'd them in his Heart for "a Pack of Jilts and Cheats, his next Care is to perswade "the World that he had like to have been entrapp'd; but "that Miss's Behaviour fell vastly short of the Expecta- "tions her Friends had rais'd in him: And as he may rea- "sonably expect, that they who were shock'd at his Assu- "rance, may not think about making a Secret of it, he'll "readily observe that all their Reports to his Disadvantage "are entirely owing to their discovering nothing in his "Conduct that favour'd their Desires."

I shall, at present, only detain the courteous Reader, while I entreat him to believe me a sincere Advocate, though unequal to the Task I have undertaken; and that he will be assur'd I hold nothing in more heinous Detestation than (as was objected by a great Poet to his Contemporary) to

Damn with faint Praise, assent with civil Leer,
And without sneering, teach the rest to sneer.

CHARLES-TOWN, March 23

On Saturday last, the Death of her late most excellent Majesty Queen Caroline was notified, from on board the Men of War, by firing, as many Minute-Guns, as she was Years old; which Ceremony was likewise observed, on Tuesday last, by the several Forts in Town.

On Monday last ended the general Sessions of the Peace, &c. when Sarah Chamberlain received Sentence of Death, for the Murder of her Bastard Child: and Alexander Forbes, being convicted of stealing a Bridle, Saddle and one pair of Boots, was ordered to be whipt, at the Cart's Tail, on Friday Morning next: Which Discipline he underwent this Time Twelve Month.

Elizabeth Ward alias Oram was found guilty upon two Indictments, the one for selling Beef, &c. by a false Scale, and the other by a false Beam; and for each Offence was fined Five Pounds Proclamation Money. Her pretended Husband Edward Oram was to have been tried for the like Offences, but he thought proper to march-off; having received an unexpected Visit from a Wife and three Children from England.

Elizabeth Davis, alias Ward, alias Oram stands likewise indicted for Polygamy, and will take her Trial next Sessions.

And whereas the Printer of this Paper, did in a Gazette of May 1736, publish a Paragraph, giving an Account of the hard Usage and ill Treatment, the Soldiers met with from the Governor of Providence; a Bill of Indictment was, on Friday last, preferred against him, for having libelled the said Governour; which Bill was by the Grand Jury returned IGNORAMUS.

We hear from Savannah in Georgia, that one Smith commonly called the golden Shoemaker, not having the Fear of God before his Eyes, but being instigated by the Devil, had trimmed a few old Spanish Bits and half Bits, to make them somewhat more shapely; was sentenced by the Judges of that Place, in their great Clemency and Wisdom, to receive 39 Lashes on the bare Back, three several Days, at the publick whipping-Post; and to be afterwards banished that Colony; hard Sentence!

Yesterday arrived Moiby Toiby King of the Cherokee-Nation, with about 70 of his great Warriors; they were met, at the Quarter-house, by the Troop of Horse-Guards and conducted to the Towns-end, where they were likewise received by the Five Companies of Foot under Arms, from whence they all marched in good Order to the Council-Chamber.
